Brother Orlac,

I am writing about Henri Calvet and his insistence on becoming part of our Order of Almousin-Metatron.

He has begun using language he does not yet understand, and has allowed two people to see a poor copy of the Sign. I do not believe this was done with hostile intent. Calvet is vain, not treacherous. That distinction may not help him if he performs the same trick in front of someone less patient than you.

He has asked to be received by Brother Troylus. I have not refused him outright. Calvet has money, discretion when frightened, and access to certain families of interest. That makes him worth testing.

If you agree to see him, do not give him the Sign of admission. Give him only the lesser formula and a card under your hand, if you judge it useful. The formula is as follows:

"Our friend presents himself within the measure of the Chamber, and asks only for the place that will be recognized as his."

He should speak the formula before presenting the card, not after. The order matters because it reminds the applicant that paper follows recognition, as we know.

Make certain he understands this. A drawn mark without a living hand behind it is at best an annoyance, at worst an insult.

You may also simply turn him away. I leave that to your judgment. My only requirement is that he not be allowed to carry an incorrect Sign through his travels while claiming that it came from us. We have enough little gentlemen treating recognition as a club privilege... I would prefer not to add another.

Send word after you have seen him, or after you decide not to.

Brother Scire
